

Reflection on our 2nd training session

Second training of the cycle of 4 training sessions of the BREATH project was organised by IAMB institute and took place in Ljubljana between August 23rd and 24th, titled "Nature and Agriculture: How to Transcend the Dominant/Dominated Relationship?".

Objective of the training was to experimentally acquire new skills to learn from Nature and implement this in professional practices. Among the participants were project partners, SCIC L'Arban, TAPH-TAPH, and Les 7 Vents along with other associates interested in the synergy of Nature and Agriculture.

If you want to know more, you can consult the report of this training available on the project website.

The progress of the project

2023 is dedicated to finalizing our Competency Framework Dedicated to the Applications of Ecological Transition, built upon an exploratory survey of targeted business skills. This framework is an important step toward creating a certification for consultants inspired by nature, practitioners of ecological integration.

Creating a certification is supported by a field survey on professions in transition, that is carried out by partners. Main focus are professionals who have experienced transition in their professional life or are practicing methods inspired by Nature.

The study on the possibilities of transferring teaching methods continued, with each partner preparing a state of the art report in their main field: agriculture, bioconstruction, pedagogical methods and spatial planning.

Along with the second training, we also met with partners for our 4th and 5th partners' meetings in Eymoutiers and Ljubljana, respectively.

When did you first become aware of the need for ecology personally, internally?

“I really feel it comes from Boy Scout moments when I was a teenager. Good moments in the forest, putting up tents and finding wood to make fire and cook. I built small wooden structures for shelters.

I realize that as a human, we are able to interact with Nature and gain something by being surrounded by natural elements and silence. These moments were shared with friends under the stars.

As an adult, globalization, industrialization and capitalism made me ask myself about my role in the world and which way to walk.

Then I left my Informatics career and used my hands helping some communities during a few years long trip in the central countries of America.” Loris Carboni
